

Health Movement Seventy Years Ago

An American Doctor Commends English Women's Enterprise

In the "Health Department" of an 1861 issue of Godey's Lady's Book and Magazine, Dr. John Standish Wilson expressed himself regarding an association which was in effect an organization for the promotion of health education. Probably he little thought that his words would be nearly, if not quite, as applicable in 1931 as in 1861, says the American Red Cross.

"We notice with much pleasure," said Dr. Wilson's article, "that there has been recently formed in London a 'Ladies' National Association for the Diffusion of Sanitary Knowledge,' many of the members of which are among the most distinguished and noble ladies of England. We also learn from the same source that the principal object of the association is the preservation of the lives and the health of women and children by diffusing a knowledge of the laws of health in regard to air, food and clothing; and we are told, moreover, that the association has distributed not less than 40,000 copies of tracts giving plain instruction upon these subjects.

"To say that we are pleased at this movement falls, greatly falls, to express our feelings; we are more than pleased, we are delighted. Next to religion (and very intimately associated with it, as we shall show at some future time) the most important concern of life is health. The blessings of health are to be attained by the diffusion of sound hygienic knowledge among the people, and in this way only; and this knowledge is to be disseminated mainly through the instrumentality of woman, by the influence of her example, and by the circulation of books and tracts on physiology and hygiene in her social intercourse. But to do the work efficiently, her efforts must not be isolated, casual, occasional or dependent on mere convenience and conventionality; they must be organized, united, certain, constant, original, untiring in season and out of season."

"We think then, that the good example of the ladies of England will be imitated by the women of America and that the 'Ladies' Association for the Diffusion of Sanitary Knowledge' will spring up all over this country, so much blessed in many respects but so grievously cursed with disease and death from ignorance of the laws of health, with a climate as congenial as any perhaps on earth, in a country where the necessities of life are produced in abundance, with institutions eminently adapted to physical as well as intellectual development.

Snakes That Start Early

There was an interesting, if possibly somewhat uninteresting, addition to the London Zoo population the other day when a Russell's viper, which had recently arrived from India, gave birth to over 100 young.

The Russell's viper is one of the most dangerous snakes in the world, not only because it is very poisonous, but also because of its ferociousness. Indian snake charmers, who think nothing of handling cobrae, won't touch the Russell's viper.

The young of the species are both active and aggressive, and though they are little larger than earthworms when newly born, they will bite if they get a chance—and the bite will produce distinctly unpleasant results. Once before, when baby Russell's vipers appeared at the Zoo, a keeper was bitten by one of the massed and considered painful.

There are other species of snakes which are just as pugnacious. The sawy ringhals, or spitting cobra, of South Africa, sits up with expanded hood and licks at his own tail as it is born.—Answers, London.

Big-game hunter: "Oh, yes, I've been nearly eaten by lions many times; but life without a little risk would be very tame." Mr. Subbaba: "I agree—I agree! How often when the weather has seemed doubtful have I deliberately gone out without my umbrella!"

An old timer is one who can remember when "Cut it out" was a slang expression instead of a popular cure.

If we know ourselves we are pretty well informed. People improve as long as they have a desire to improve. Courteous people are usually treated courteously.

Speaking of a certain drugstore, a man said: "It is a pretty good drugstore all right, but he puts too much pepper in his chicken salad."

"It's the truth that I speak," says Archibald Green.
"A girl on the lap is worth two on the corner."

Male Straphanger: "Madam, you are standing on my foot."
Female Ditto: "I beg your pardon. I thought it belonged to the man sitting down."

So tasty... so economical

Still salad dressing is different. It has no oily taste, it's a creamy smooth and has an exquisite, fresh flavor that adds new pleasure to every salad dish.

In addition, it's so economical that now you can afford to serve tasty salad dressings. A large 12 ounce jar sells for only 25 cents, one-half the price you're used to paying for this standard of quality. Try some today. Your grocer can supply you.

Bird

The mystery of dawn which lengthening hours dispel is finely realized in The Commonweal (New York):
By Frances M. Frost

The dawn came wan, the dawn grew gold.

The light poured down toward in the early cold.

The colors, dreaming against the sky, Leaned over water; and the small cool cry

Of crystal groped for rock and sand, While the sky dripped blue on lake and land.

The sun rose up, a flower of gold: The hills were petaled, laid on fold, With flame. And suddenly morning stirred—

Morning was shattered by a hidden bird!

The song blew east, the song blew west.

The song blew wild in the listening breeze!

While morning woke to beauty and pain.

The song was a breath of silver rain. A blossom of sun, and wings upturned Over the known and lovely world!

The song was the pointed shadow of a leaf.

On the turning earth, and hush of grief. A shoulder of wind, and a star above. A dawn-dusk hill, and an answer to love.

Silence came. The sun grew tall; The dim woods watched the petals fall.

And wind went searching each hidden way

For a lost bird caught to the heart of day!

Planes Warned to Fly High
Over American Prisons

Washington. — A warning to all aviators against flying above either Federal or State prisons at an altitude lower than 1,000 feet was given recently by Gilbert G. Budwig, director of air regulations of the Department of Commerce.

Stating that complaints had been received recently of planes flying near prisons, Mr. Budwig said that the amendment made to the air traffic rules in April apparently was "not understood." This rule, he said, applied except when there was an established landing field nearby.

He pointed out that under the air commerce act penalties might be assessed for violations.

Boarder—"Come quick—two rats are fighting in my room."
Landlady—"Well, what do you expect to get for fifty cents a bull fight?"

Tommy—"Isn't 'wholesome' a funny word, father?"

Father—"What's so funny about it?"

Tommy—"Why, take away the 'whole' and you've got 'some' left."

"I hope you are going to dance this evening, Mr. Summers."
"You bet I am. You didn't think I came up here for my vacation simply to rest, did you?"

Dentists in the States
With 67,000 dentists, one to every 1,700 persons, America leads the world in dentistry and dental training, according to the Dental States Office of Education, in spite of the fact that it has been estimated that only one-fourth of the American people receive dental service. There is, however, only one dentist to every 4,500 persons in Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi and South Carolina, and one to every 3,000 persons in Arizona, Georgia, Kentucky, New Mexico, North Carolina, Texas and Virginia. There is said to be only one Negro dentist to every 1,500 Negroes.

31 To Be Record Year For Winter Fair

Increased Number of Exhibits from Prairies in June
Butter Competition

Toronto.—An unmistakable proof of confidence in Western Canadian agriculture has just been registered at the Royal Winter Fair in the remarkable entries received in the June butter competition. Not only does the total make a record for the ten years of the Royal Winter Fair but a more significant feature is that the whole of the increases are accounted for by the prairie provinces. Ties from Saskatchewan, for example, have been increased nearly 100 per cent. The directorate of the Royal Winter Fair considers the record entry this year a most convincing proof of Western faith in the underlying soundness of agriculture. It may be added that so far as can be judged from early intensions to exhibit, the outlook for livestock entries is equally ray.

All the June butter exhibits have now been received at the Royal and are safely in storage under controlled conditions of temperature, etc. They will not be disturbed until removal for display and competition at the Coliseum just prior to the opening of the Winter Fair on November 19th.

The Royal of 1931, its tenth year, is to be a "Commemorative Show," intended to mark its "birth," and to signalize the establishment of a national centre where Canadian agriculture was first focussed so as to visualize its importance, and where, in the decade that has ensued, it has been given a worthy and rightful place in Canadian affairs.

Giant "Spark Plug" New Foe of Lightning

Pittsburgh engineers recently shot enough electricity through an experimental lightning-rod to lift the Westworth Building off its feet.

The giant "spark plug" at the new Westinghouse high-power laboratory blasted into action for the first time as over 133 million voltamperes leapt across the terminals in the lightning rod on test.

There was a burst of flame from each end of the rod and a report like a six-inch cannon as the experimental lightning-rod "knocked out" the terrific lightning belt in less than 1/1000 of a second. J. J. Torck, inventor of the rod, is thus quoted in a Westinghouse News Bulletin:

"The results of the tests are so promising that we are working night and day to finish its development. We hope it will effect greater economies in present forms of lightning protective devices now in service to protect industrial structures on overland transmission lines which supply cities with light and power. In addition, it is expected to provide permanent protection against the ravages of lightning and save the country millions of dollars a year."

"Now, after a lightning stroke, protective devices of the type type must be replaced. This requires constant patrolling of the lines. Because of the limitations of a single line, duplicate lines must be constructed. The new lightning-rod does away with this expense."

The construction of the device is simple, we are told. It consists of a hollow tube about the size of a lady's umbrella. A piece of metal at each end serves as an electrode to entice the lightning inside for the "knock-out" blow. It is supposed to work so fast that the lights in a home will not even flicker. The bulletin concludes:

"This device, technically known as a 'De-ion' lightning protector, is used to protect insulating structures on transmission lines against flashover. Engineers have estimated that if the Torck lightning-rod is successful and had been available ten years ago, the world would have saved a hundred million dollars."

Pearlful
A torrid agency inserted an advertisement for a man who was required to court parties abroad. A hard-up young man, who desired an easy pet, applied and was given an interview.

"Good morning," said the agency official. "Paris von Francist?"

"I—er—beg your pardon?" stammered the applicant.

"Paris von Francist?"

"I—ah—frantically sorry, but I didn't quite catch."

"I said, 'Do you speak French?'"

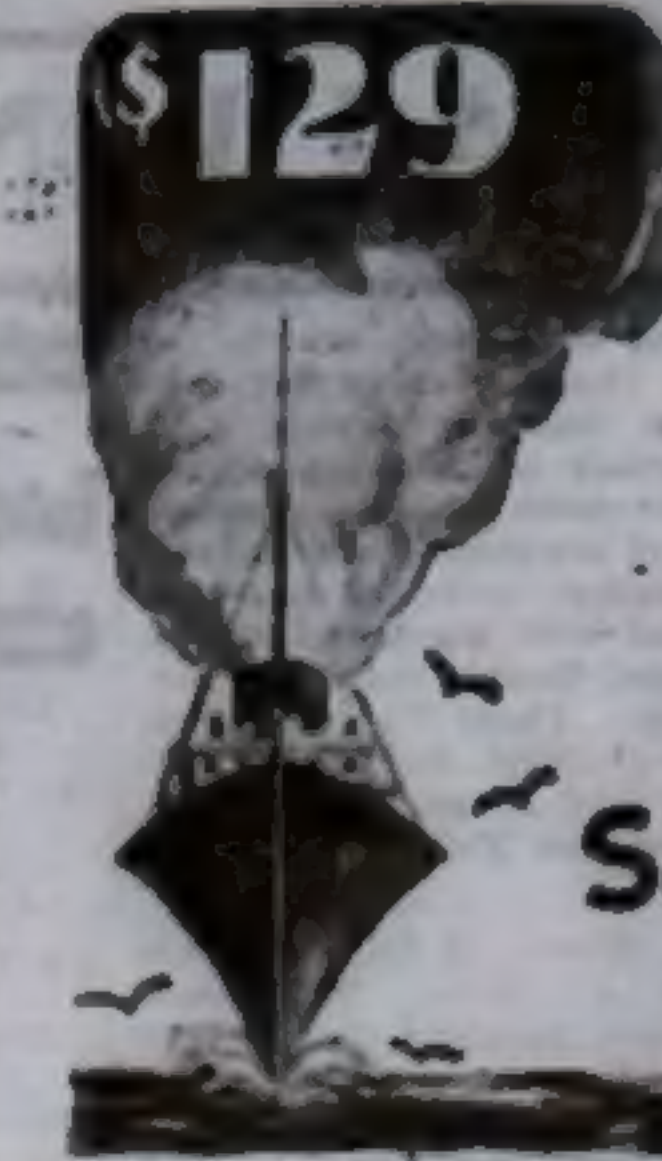

The young man smiled easily.

"Oh, yes," he said, "fluently."

The old man was showing the somewhat freshly-dressed individual to his room in the seaside boarding house. At the door he paused and said: "I presume everyone here dresses for dinner?" The maid looked dumbly at him. "Oh, yes, sir," she replied at last. "Any meals taken in bed are extra."

Midsummer Eve

Lovers of Nature will enjoy this excerpt from "Wild Honey," by Samuel Mcville, Jr. All the color of ferns, foliage and bird voices are clearly portrayed.

It was Midsummer Eve when I reached the cabin. The swift stream stretched away in the moonlight like silvered velvet, and the leaves of the sweet gums and the swamp maples made a dim, green web along its banks.

Overhead, some bird which I could not identify gave a strange, wild cry and repeated it a few seconds later a great distance away, showing how fast it was flying through the black-velvet sky above.

The shadows of the waving trees made a fretted, magical pattern on the smooth surface of the water. A pine-barrow pickered frog, all emerald and gold and purple-black, snored, and some other frogs unknown to me gave a couple of loud, startling notes which sounded like the clapping of two boards together. Then suddenly, in the distance, the stressed, hurried notes of a whippoorwill pealed through the darkness to be answered by one close to the cabin. Over and over and over again these birds of the night repeated their triple notes with a little click after each one, hurrying as if they feared to be interrupted before they could finish. As the wild, sweet melody thrilled through the darkness, it seemed to me as if two moonlight kisses had been set to music. When it stopped, the lonely wails laid lay still as sleep. Then, as the full moon climbed the sky, from far-away bays and gold-green pools came the clear voices of late hyacinths, like tangled chimneys of my silver bells.

When they stopped for breath, the wood frogs, as if they had waited for that moment, burst out into a perfect pandemonium of hoarding, quacking notes.

When at last the chance of the dream stopped as suddenly as it had begun, I left my bag in the cabin and in the moonlight hurried down a winding path which led through a little dip in the soft yellow grass where, not fifty yards from my porch, the wild deer bed in winter. Just at the edge of this hollow I found a clump of the flowers which I had hoped to see. Red, gold, ivory-white, and pale green, they grew from a mass of hollow, crimson-streaked leaves filled with clear water, and I knelt down in the moonlight to revel in the beauty of the pitcher plants, which I had not seen in blossom for three long years.

The sight of them brought to my mind another discovery that I had made the day when last I found them blossoming, and I followed the path until it wound through tangle of ochre-colored grass. Parting their stems, I searched through several without finding anything. Then, as I came to the last tangle of all, a tiny bird slipped away like a shadow, giving an alarm note sharp as the clicking of two pebbles together. Before me in the moonlight showed a deep nest of

Here and there through the fabric of the nest were woven dry leaves, the field mark of the nest of the Maryland yellow-throat, who wears a black domino and has a song that sounds like "witchery, witchery, witchery." ## Pay Last Tribute To Thorold Constable Coming from town and district, a large gathering of friends and relatives paid tribute to the late Frank Collins as his remains were laid to rest last week. It was one of the largest funerals ever held in Thorold, and brother officers from the St. Catharines, Beamsville, Merritt and the Provincial Police paid their last respects to one who for eleven years capably filled the position of Chief Constable in Thorold, forming a guard of honour at the home, church and graveside.

The funeral was held from his late residence, 45 Richmond Street, to Holy Trinity Church, where Rev. Father Sullivan celebrated requiem high mass, and thence to Lakeside cemetery where interment took place amidst a profusion of beautiful floral tokens.

Six police leaders acted as honorary bearers: Chief Wm. Shannon, St. Catharines; Chief Dennis Harold, Thorold Township; Chief Theo. Shelton, Thorold Town; Chief John Doris, Niagara Falls; and Sgt. Steve Elliot, Ontario Provincial Police.

Mrs. J. A. Jewett, of Hamilton, was the speaker at Holy Trinity Church, Grimsby, morning and evening on Sunday, her address being of an inspirational character. Effective vocal numbers were contributed by Mrs. C. S. Dean and Miss Betty Butler.

Soliciting Funds For Benevolent Work

Miss Ann D. Pope, Deaconess of the Upper Canada Tract Society, is in town soliciting funds for this benevolent work.

Since 1832 the Upper Canada Tract Society—interdenominational in character, evangelical in principle, interracial in purpose and international in scope, has followed its objects with undeviating loyalty.

It maintains a large and commodious bookstore at 126 University Avenue, Toronto, the profits of which are used in Missionary and Welfare Work throughout the Dominion of Canada.

For nearly one hundred years the Tract Society has ministered by means of the printed page, in many languages, to those in Hospital, Prison and in the Home. It distributes the choicest Christian literature and thus helps in counteracting atheistic and communist tendencies.

It has sent (gratis) many thousands of selected books to Soldiers, Sailors, Light House Keepers, Canadian Mounted Police, Miners, Lumberjacks, Sick Children, etc.

It has for 63 years maintained an extensive Mission to the thousands of Sailors on the Great Lakes; owns and operates the Royal Sailors' Institute at the head of Lake Superior; also smaller Institutes at Toronto and Kingston.

There is an increased demand for the Society's services to meet the urge of the great need, which requires an increased revenue, hence the urgent appeal for assistance, being made.

URGENT INSPECTION OF SHIPMENTS

May Petition Ottawa For Compulsory Inspection of All Fruits and Vegetables Coming To East and Prairie Markets

Meetings of the Ontario growers' markets council are being held to consider petitioning Ottawa for compulsory inspection of all fruits and vegetables shipped to the east and prairie markets.

C. W. Bauer, secretary of the Ontario growers' markets council, points out the reasons advanced in favor of this move. The council has been formed for the purpose of developing large markets in Canada for Ontario's fruits and vegetables.

Part of the council's work also is to encourage growers to adopt central packing and cold storage methods so that customers outside of Ontario will be given uniform and satisfactory grades of produce, packed and packaged according to their requirements. Unfortunately Ontario in the past has lost part of its reputation for good produce through the practice of growers and shippers not grading and packing their shipment as they would have to be graded and packed if they were required to pass government inspection. Another great evil has been the practice and shipping green and immature fruit, which has given Ontario's products a bad name, particularly in the west, in this regard.

The directors of the Ontario growers' markets council are considering this question at the present time, and it is expected that the growers will be asked to authorize representations to Ottawa in this connection.

The grandstand at the Canadian National Exhibition has a seating capacity of 16,000.

Cowling—All the covering of the engine, on a motor car this would be called the hood.

Cord—The width of the wing.

Dihedral—The acute angle made by the wing with the horizontal.

Dope—This is a liquid made from 50% benzene oil and 50% acetone, used to tighten the covering of the aeroplans, if the builder so desires. Do not use on commercial models. This is sometimes mixed with aluminum powder to make aluminum dope.

Elevator—The movable part of the tail plane which causes the aeroplans to climb or dive.

Fairing Rib—A special rib used on the De-Havilland Push Moth to streamline the upper ends of the wing struts.

Fuselage—The body of the plane.

Joy Stick—The lever by which the pilot controls the ailerons and elevator.

folded clipped to side of fuselage when not in use.

Landing gear, also called undercarriage—to which the wheels are attached.

Longeron—The longitudinal members of the fuselage.

Looking For Heirs
of F. J. Walker

Police Chief Demill has received a communication from C. J. O'Brien, councillor-at-law, of New York City, stating that he is trying to locate the heirs of Francis J. Walker, who died in the States, in order to see that they are paid an inheritance due them.

Mr. Walker, it is further stated was born in Canada in the year 1856, being born of Frank Walker and Eliza Doherty. It is believed that he has a brother or children of a brother residing somewhere in Canada. From information received, the letter reads, it would appear, that the relatives might be located in this district or nearby this district.

CONSTANT VIGILANCE IS REQUIRED

"One in each thousand motor vehicles in use in Canada is each year involved in a fatal accident," said W. G. Robertson, Gen. Manager of the Ontario Motor League, in an address broadcast last evening by radio from Toronto. "The toll of human life must be reduced," he declared, questioning, "How can it be done?"

"Safe roads, safe cars and safe drivers are the chief elements which make for the freedom from highway accidents," he claimed. "Studies of accident statistics have shown that most automobile accidents happen in broad daylight on dry, level roads of good surface with experienced drivers at the wheels of safe cars. This is mainly due to the fact that by far the greater proportion of road mileage is run under these conditions. Relatively, night driving is more hazardous than day driving on wet pavements more dangerous than dry, and unfit cars and inexperienced drivers more likely to become involved in accidents than fit cars and experienced drivers. Many automobile accidents occur under ideal conditions simply because the driver happens to be off guard," Mr. Robertson pointed out.

Since 1927 the Ontario Motor League, organized at that time, has been striving to secure safety on the highways, said Mr. Robertson, and in this work has co-operated with the Department of Highways, municipal authorities and Ontario Safety League. Much has been accomplished, and, as a result, the fatal accident record of Ontario, he said, stand among the best on the Continent.

"After all has been said and done, the prevention of accidents on the highways remains a responsibility resting on the individual drivers of vehicles and pedestrians," he declared. "Nothing short of constant vigilance on the part of all who travel afoot or on wheels can keep the casualty list down."

"Safe roads and safer cars may be built. More effective laws may be made; all this will help much, but in the end the driver which will count the most of all," contended Mr. Robertson "for accident prevention will be the exercise of greater and more constant care and vigilance on the part of each individual who uses the public thoroughfare."

HON. E. D. SMITH

984 gallons; last year she exported 528,390 gallons. In 1922 Spain exported to Canada 119,604 gallons, and last year 234,500 gallons. Portugal exported to this country in 1922 only 31,117 gallons; but last year the quantity increased to 140,000 gallons. Italy in 1922 exported to Canada only 5,505 gallons; last year, 73,650 gallons. The total from all these countries amounted in 1922 to 251,933 gallons, and in 1931 to 545,337 gallons, an increase of 234 per cent in nine years. During the same period our population increased not more than ten or fifteen per cent. This shows how our wine consumption tends to increase imports.

Now that there is an advantage of almost a dollar a gallon in favour of an Australian wine similar to the wines that come from European countries, surely the trade will go largely to Australia. So far as that is concerned, it is all to the good. I believe thoroughly in encouraging trade with the other Dominions and the Mother Country, and in giving them a preference even over friendly countries with which we have been trading.

But we must ask what effect this is going to have on the Canadian wine industry. It is true that at the present time we do not manufacture very much wine, if any, of the grade that I have referred to. Possibly no home will be done. If prices remain at the present level, I do not believe the Canadian wine industry will suffer any injury; but with the enormous advantages that the Australian producers have under the treaty they could reduce their prices so that our Canadian wine makers could not compete unless some very important concessions or amendments were granted by the Government. The business of 42 cents a gallon on the Australian wine covers not only the duty of 25 cents a gallon, but also the freight to Vancouver, thus enabling the price at which they sell their product in Canada to be as low as the price of the European producers, who have to pay a heavy duty, but also for our own wine makers, to compete. There are several concessions, however, that would enable our own wine manufacturers to enter into successful competition.

Before discussing that point, however, let me indicate some of the handicaps under which our own wine makers labour. First, they are subject to the excise tax of 75 cents a gallon on the wine they produce. In Australia there is no such tax. Last year they have to pay an excise tax of $9 a gallon on the spirit that is used to fortify it. In Australia it is free. Because of that tax of $9 a gallon our wine makers do not use spirits. The complaint has been made that our wine makers do not make a good wine. They cannot, because they cannot afford to pay the $9 a gallon for spirit to fortify the wine. Then there is the sales tax of 4 per cent. Further, the wine makers must have refined sugar; they say nothing else will do. Prior to the present season of Parliament there was a rebate on refined sugar, equivalent to the duty paid on it. That rebate amounted to about $1.99 a hundred. That has been abandoned. All the wine makers get now is a rebate of 25 cents a hundred—the duty on the raw sugar paid by the refiner in Canada—a difference of about $1.40 to their disadvantage. In spite of all this they have to compete with the Australian wine makers who receive a bonus of 42 cents a gallon.

I wish now to say just a few words in regard to the situation of our grape growers. Grape-growing has been quite profitable in Canada for a number of years. It began to be profitable I think, when the prohibition law was passed in the United States. At that time the price of grapes in that country went so high that we were able to export them from Canada, and the growers here got big prices for them. For two or three years the price was maintained by reason of the purchases of our wine makers, and as a result the growers made heavy plantings, at the rate of 2,000 acres a year, for perhaps four years. The first plantings are now in full bearing, the second plantings in half bearing, and the others are bearing a little or coming into bearing, and during the next few years grape production will be increased. Up to the present production has been absorbed by the wine makers and the fresh grape market. The fresh grape market has taken, I should say, around 4,000 tons, and the wine makers have taken in good years as high as 14,000 tons. This year the crop is expected to reach 30,000 tons. About a year ago the wine makers filled their tanks with concentrated grape juice from California. Prohibition in the United States caused a great increase in the production of wine in this country, and the price of grapes went very high—$120 a ton. As a consequence the growers in California commenced to plant heavily; they planted 200,000 acres within two years. When I say that we have not more than 12,000 or 15,000 acres of grapes in Canada you will realize what that over-production means. Then the price went so low that the year the Government paid up California growers $9 a ton to leave a portion of their grapes on the vine in order that they might get something for the remainder. Then they found an outlet for their product by making concentrated grape juice. Our wine makers became aware of that before the grape growers did, and filled up their tanks with it. They bought the equivalent of about 10,000 tons of grapes, which were shipped over here in tank cars. Then the grape growers of Canada applied to the Government, and at the last session of the last Parliament provision was made to enable the Government by Order in Council to place a higher duty on this concentrated grape juice, if it was fit. Previously the duty was not more than one-quarter of the duty on fresh grapes. A few days after the election, before the last Government went out of power, it passed an Order in Council providing that the duty on concentrated grape juice should be equivalent to the duty on fresh grapes. If that had been done a year earlier it would have saved the situation.

The importation of that grape juice is one of the things that are helping to cause an overplus of grapes at the present time of depression, when there is not as great a demand for wine as there has been in previous years. This year there is bound to be a surplus of anywhere from 10,000 to 15,000 tons of grapes unless some very drastic steps are taken, by regulation or otherwise, to remove some of the impediments in the way of manufacturing wine. Unless that is done the grape-growers here will suffer a great calamity as in the California grape-growers' case.

Now I will mention some of the things that I think ought to be done by the Government. First, it should grant a remission of the sales tax of 7 1/2 cents a gallon on wine. That is an easy thing to do, but it will detract from the revenue going into the treasury.

Hon. Mr. Macdonnell White: I think the sales tax would apply to the Australian wine as well as to the Canadian. I think it is levied on both.

Hon. Mr. Smith: Probably it is. I should not have said the sales tax; I meant the excise tax. I mentioned the sales tax before. That might be remedied. But both the sales tax and the excise tax produce considerable revenue, and at the present time the Government cannot stand any reduction of revenue.

There are other things, however, that could be done and would not cause any loss of revenue. Owing to the lack of regulations and to the responsibility of many wine makers, wine has been made from as little as five pounds of grapes to the gallon. When I tell you that it takes thirteen and one-half pounds of grapes to produce a gallon of pure grape juice, you will realize what poor wine it is. The Government might pass a regulation requiring manufacturers to use not less than six or ten pounds of grapes to a gallon of wine. The wine makers say that there is an objection to going beyond that point; that because of the acidity of the grapes they must put in a certain quantity of sugar. If the Government were to pass a regulation compelling the wine makers to use a large quantity of grapes as it is possible to use in the making of good wine, the increase in the consumption of grapes, should we produce as much wine as we have done in prosperous years, would be about 4,000 tons. That would absorb a considerable portion of the surplus.

Of course, that regulation would not be effective this year, because the wine makers, having pretty well filled their tanks with concentrated grape juice, are not going to buy a large quantity of grapes. It is currently stated, and it is stressed by them, that they cannot use more than 1,000 tons of grapes. Here is another measure. Last year we imported into this country 16,350 tons of grapes—a most astonishing quantity—and the year before 13,250 tons; for the two years an average of about 15,000 tons.

Hon. Mr. Smith: Monthly from the States. These grapes came in over a duty of two cents a pound. The Government could, if it chose, fix a value so that that duty would be doubled. Such action would surely keep out a great quantity of those grapes. If it kept out half of them and conditions were normal in this country the entire surplus of our grape crop would be absorbed.

There is something else that the Government could do, and it is of more importance than all these things put together. Wine makers in this country might be permitted by the Government, as those in other countries—at least those who export—are permitted, to manufacture the spirits to fortify their wines from nothing but grapes. Wine is being shipped into Canada under a bonus of 42 cents a gallon, and no excise tax is paid on it nor on the spirits used to fortify it. Why should not the Canadian wine makers be able to fortify his wines with free spirits made from grapes? I am told by a prominent wine maker that if the Government took that action and if all the wine were fortified—some of it might not be fortified, of course, for there would be no competition in the matter—as large a quantity of grapes would be needed to make the spirits as to make the wine. There are not enough grapes grown in Canada to-day to supply the combined demand that would exist in normal times.

I have made four or five suggestions and I hope the Government will adopt at least enough of them to keep the grape industry from being wrecked this year. There is no question in my mind that unless some drastic action is taken the situation will be as bad in Ontario as it is in California, where the growers cannot sell half of the crop. I understand that a great deal of pressure is being brought to bear upon the Government, and that it is considering some of these suggestions at the present time. I want to stress particularly the importance of free spirits for fortifying the wine. It may be said that this would tend to encourage the use of stronger wines. Well, we are encouraging that now by allowing stronger wines to enter Canada from France and other countries at low rates of duty, and free Australia at a particularly low rate, and under a bonus. Surely it would be no more harmful to allow our own people to make their spirits from grapes and thus give them a chance to supply our Canadian people with home-made wines.

Hon. Mr. Harmer: May I ask the honourable gentleman a question? Does the Australian Government permit the grape growers and wine producers to fortify their wines with the natural alcoholic content of the grape?

Hon. Mr. Smith: Yes, it does, for export.

Hon. Mr. Harmer: For export only?

Hon. Mr. Smith: Yes, for export only.

ly. That is free of duty. Of course, for home consumption there is an excise tax.

Hon. Mr. Harmer: I have another question to ask, for my own information only. Does the alcoholic content of our wine or whether it may be of Australian wine imported into Canada preclude the importation of the duty of $9 a gallon? The wine contains a certain alcoholic content. I think the figure 34 was mentioned. I do not know what that means, but I understand it signifies a certain alcoholic content.

Hon. Mr. Smith: Do I understand the question to be: Is there any excise tax on that?

Hon. Mr. Harmer: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Smith: There is no excise tax on that.

Hon. Mr. Harmer: Because it comes under the 24, that prevents the application of the excise tax?

Hon. Mr. Smith: There is no excise tax either on the wine or on the spirits used to fortify it, if it is exported.

Honourable Mr. Willoughby:—I do not intend to analyse the advantages of the treaty to Canada. Because of his life-long business career the honourable gentleman from West-worth (Hon. Mr. Smith) is well qualified to deal with the matters he discussed. I am sure that his observations will be brought to the attention of the Government by the honourable gentleman to my right (Hon. Mr. Robertson), and some of the conditions referred to may be remedied.

Hon. A. H. Macdonnell: Honourable members, I desire to congratulate the honourable gentleman from West-worth (Hon. Mr. Smith) for the lucid way in which he presented his case. But he omitted to inform us on two points which I think should be cleared up in order that we may be able to decide whether this Bill should be passed or not. I should like to know the approximate number of grape growers who will be affected if this Bill is passed or rejected. Secondly, I should like my honourable friend to tell me approximately the amount of Canadian capital that would be affected by the passage or rejection of this Bill. We really cannot proceed further with this matter until we know whether there are few or many grape growers concerned, and whether they have invested only a few thousands of dollars or many hundreds of thousands.

Hon. Mr. Smith: I might say to my honourable friend that there are at least 15,000 acres of grapes. On each acre there would be at least $100 worth of material—such as vines, posts, wire, and so on—which I suppose might be considered as an investment. That is in addition to the value of the land. I do not know the number of men, but it would be in the thousands, who are engaged in producing grapes in the Niagara district. The industry is a very important one from other points of view. Grapes are grown upon land that is not quite suitable for peaches, cherries, or berries, and about half the land in the Niagara district, where the climate is so favourable for the production of grapes, is of this type. That district has room for the production of at least three times as many grapes as are now being grown there. But even if we utilized all our suitable land we should fall short of Australia, where at present 44,000 acres are used by grape growers.

Hon. Mr. Macdonnell: May I ask what is approximately the amount of Canadian capital that would be affected if this Bill were passed?

Hon. Mr. Smith: The wine industry is a big one.

Hon. Mr. Macdonnell: We want to know the approximate figures.

Hon. Mr. Smith: I do not know what the capital is, but it is large. I do not go so far as to say that the Bill will seriously injure the wine industry or the grape-growers, provided the Government adopts some of these proposals to take up some of the surplus this year.

Hon. Mr. Harmer: The honourable gentleman has quoted figures showing the increase in the importation of wine from 1922 to 1929. Could he give us also the increase in the production of grapes in the Niagara district during the same period?

Hon. Mr. Smith: In Canada?

Hon. Mr. Harmer: Or in Canada.

Hon. Mr. Smith: I could not give that. It has increased very much. Speaking roughly, I should say it has doubled.

$10,000 Barn Fire
At Niagara Falls

Damage estimated at about $10,000 was caused at the farm of Crawford Crede, Niagara Boulevard, when fire destroyed the barns and outbuildings two horses, a prize bull, two cows and a quantity of grain. The fire started in a strawstack threatening having been completed only an hour before. The blaze spread with great rapidity to the other outbuildings. The Chippawa Fire Department put up a good fight, with their pumper at the river's edge and prevented the spread of the fire. The Niagara Falls Department was called, but it was impossible to get its big pumper close to the water because of the high bank. The house, some distance from the barns, was untouched by the fire. It is understood that the loss is almost completely covered by insurance.

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern

A charmingly slender printed chiffon robe adds attractive femininity to the skirt through circular details. A fitted hip robe merges into a panel at the front and at the back, which contributes further lengthened line.

The bodice with slight all-around pleating rolls its front in revers and adds a vest with V-neckline to detract from broadness. The inverted pin-tucked shoulders with contrasting effect at the back neckline is decorative.

This unusual Style No. 2634 may be had in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust.

No. 2634, size 36, requires 4 1/2 yards of 39-inch material with 3/4 yard 35-inch contrasting.

Silk crepe, tulle, printed linen and printed batiste are lovely in the new pastel shades to freshen your mid-summer wardrobe.

Summer Resorts Declared Healthy

Toronto. — The Sanitation (June) number of the Canadian Public Health Journal provides extremely interesting reading. There are several articles dealing with sanitation in Summer Resorts, Fresh Air Camps, Recreational Centres, etc. These articles have been contributed by members of the Public Health Engineering section of the Canadian Public Health Association.

"The sanitary conditions in summer resorts of Quebec are satisfactory," states Theo. J. Lafreniere, C.E., "and the control is obtained through the ordinary organization of the Provincial Bureau of Health, whose activities are largely rural in character. However, these who are moving to the country during the summer months should take ordinary precautions to safeguard their health. The quality of the drinking water in country hotels is well controlled, but wells, springs and creeks along the roads should not be trusted. Bathing in streams and lakes should not be indulged in, unless it is known to be safe."

"Engineers of the Provincial Department of Health of Ontario exercise continuous supervision during the vacation period over the more popular regions such as Georgian Bay, Muskoka, Lake of Bays and others," states Dr. A. E. Berry, Director, Sanitary Engineering Division, Ontario Department of Health.

"Such matters as water supply, sewage, refuse disposal and milk supply are all given very careful and adequate attention."

"The Department of Health of Ontario through its programme for summer resorts is endeavoring to protect the citizens of the Province as well as those who are guests from other parts" is the concluding sentence of this interesting article.

Democracy on Trial

London Morning Post: Democracy is everywhere on its trial in many countries it has already succumbed to the "tyranny" or, in modern parlance, dictatorship, which Plato long ago foretold was its ultimate end.

It is when liberty is perverted into licence that democracy fails in a country to some strong man, who will impose upon it the order and the discipline which it could not achieve for itself. The full-blooded "rule by the people" which we know in this country today is still in its infancy.

With centuries of political training to reinforce the native good sense of the British character. We still believe that our democracy will reach a healthy adolescence and triumph over the follies that have destroyed so many of its predecessors. But the descent is so facile that neither leaders nor followers can afford to take risks. We live in a testing time, which may make or mar our young democracy; let the nation brace itself up here and now.

Keep thyself simple, good, pure, serious, free from affection, a friend of Justice, a worshipper of the gods, kind, affectionate, strenuous in all proper acts. Strive to continue to be such as philosophy wished to make thee. Reverence the gods, and help men.—Marcus Aurelius.

A HAPPY ENDING

By URSULA BLOOM

Young George knew nobody at Little Shrimpton. He did not see much chance of ever knowing anybody. He had come here because his chum Harry Clark was engaged to a girl who was staying in a bungalow at the far end.

"A ripping place, Little Shrimpton," Harry had said, "real country life—no nonsense about it."

There was much too little nonsense about it for young George. He dug his hands deeper into the pockets of his brand-new flannels as he sat between the huts along the front. All private property, these huts, he could not get one for love or money, which complicated the bathing arrangements considerably.

Then the girl came out. She wore a bathing dress, a nice, friendly sort of bathing dress, and she was attractive. Young, vivacious, gold hair and blue eyes.

"Oh, I say," she said. "Excuse me, but do you happen to be sitting on my bathing cap?"

Young George rose hurriedly. "I'm most frightfully sorry," he said. "An adorable bathing cap, silver with a tiny rabbit race at the side. A bathing cap you could not mistake. By Jove, careless of me."

"Not at all. I dropped it when I came down to bathe. I don't want it for myself either, which is so funny. Father wears it."

"Father?"

"Yes, it keeps the water out of his ears. He is a bit funny. Blue eyes laughing; very like the sea itself, he thought. Then she stopped herself. "I suppose you know lots of people here?"

"Nobody at all." And he was looking how beautiful she was, and what an adorable dress.

"I say, that's pretty roomy."

"Still, I know you now."

She paused a moment and looked round furtively, and then bent closer. "Yes, only be careful of Father. He is an old miser and he's young men. It makes it frightfully dull for me."

"I say! Will he mind?"

"He'll mind frightfully, only I must know someone—it is so awfully dull."

At that moment a hand appeared round the hut door, a wrathful head. It was an outrageous pale face with three chins in footless boots. The body, of ample proportions, was chafely garbed in a striped bathing costume.

"Who's this?" demanded the admiral. "The old fool will throttle me," he thought. He gurgled and fought wildly. The hand screamed its wild approval.

But the clutch held of the trembled admiral was more than human nature could bear; George, spluttering for breath and in real danger of being drowned, hit out and caught the admiral's hand smartly in the breathing apparatus. The admiral let go. It was then that George had the rather horrifying experience of seeing the old man sink. He went "Gung" like a stone. George dived after him, seized him, and brought him to the surface again, then solemnly began to pedal for the shore.

"Crump," gurgled the admiral. "This is all wrong," thought George. "He'll never forgive me for this. He is supposed to be saving me, and here am I saving him. Something must be done about it." He murmured something out loud. "Can you manage now, sir?"

"I'm all right."

"Then," said George valiantly, coughing round one eye and seeing they had but a few yards to go, "I can do no more, you will have to get me to the beach."

When the admiral waded ashore with George in his arms, the gratified beach yelled its approval.

"Marvellous, sir," said the local reporter, who had managed to be passing and was taking notes, "bringing him in all that way."

The admiral looked weakly at George. George nodded. "I owe my life to you sir," he said, and stretched out a hand. Solemnly they shook on it. "Lunch with me!" murmured the admiral.

"Delighted," said George.

The local paper talked about it as the most charming little romance of the year. Ever since the admiral had saved young George everybody had looked for the happy ending. Well, now they had got it. Such a very happy ending, gurgled the paper.

It is queer that among his many beatitudes the admiral never brings that adventure. But, whatever happens, he has got to put up with a son-in-law.

"There are some things you have got to swallow," said George in triumph to Belle, "and he finds I am one of them."

Such a very happy ending.

Who said: "It is so frightfully important to you that he should like you?"

"Yes," said George, and he looked down into her eyes and wondered what they would look like much closer, and her mouth, and wondered what it would feel like much closer.

"Yes," he said earnestly, "it is."

They sat down in the reading granary at the cliff edge. "Supper," said George, "I swam out to sea and saved his life!"

"He'd never forgive you."

"But, Belle, why not?"

"Because he prides himself on his swimming. Frightfully keen about it; he is; says you young generation don't know what's what. He'd simply hate to be saved."

"He might not hate it so much if he were really drowning," young George thought to himself, but aloud he said, "Very well! I'll let him save me."

He had meant it as a joke, but Belle took it seriously. She clasped her hands. "George—what a marvellous ideal! He'd simply love that. Look what the people would say, and the paper; he is always talking about his swimming and nobody ever listens. He would be quite carried away by that."

"But what about me?"

"It was your suggestion."

"I know, but I didn't mean it like that."

At the moment it was extremely difficult to explain how he had meant it.

They talked it over. George was not enthusiastic, but strange ideas kept occurring to him. She had the loveliest little hands; her ears, too, like shells close against her head. And all the while there was this silly old admiral to be got round. Why, he asked himself, in the name of Heaven, Raleigh, and Drake, did they ever invent admirals?

The following morning there was a most unfortunate accident on the beach. It was well-timed, just at that hour when all the bathers of the place had collected together and were sitting about under sunshades. The admiral, prepared for his bath, was "testing the water" with his toe.

George, who had been pretending to be fishing in a small boat some distance out at sea, gave a howl of anguish. The boat wobbled—he had never known that it was so difficult to upset a thing in his life—he swayed this way and that, and only by putting his entire weight on one side did he manage to submerge himself.

The admiral surveyed the scene; he plunged into the sea; he swam out in the approved style. The beach gasped, gaped, and was gratified.

"The dear, brave old man," said the leader of the back-biters, to her lady friend.

George felt himself clasped round the neck. "The old fool will throttle me," he thought. He gurgled and fought wildly. The hand screamed its wild approval.

But the clutch held of the trembled admiral was more than human nature could bear; George, spluttering for breath and in real danger of being drowned, hit out and caught the admiral's hand smartly in the breathing apparatus. ## The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

What came before Captain Jimmy is forced down on a deserted island while trying General Lu from China to Japan. They had no guns, so decide to try their luck at fishing.

That was an idea. The shores of that island had never been touched in a thousand years. No doubt the water fairly teemed with fish. But the suggestion nearly cost the lives of two of us on the next day. Early the next morning we kindled a high bonfire on the bald peak of the island, and piled on plenty wet grass to make smoke. If any ship passed within miles, it would be sure to see our signal.

All day we gathered wood and piled it near, so we could make a big bright fire through the night. The interpreter and I went down to the shore to fish.

Taking a pin from my coat I made a rough fish hook. This I fastened to the end of a long cord, and cutting off a corner of General Lu's bright colored cloak, we had a home-made, but attractive fish-bait.

The interpreter begged for a chance to try his luck, and I let him go first. We selected a little sandy cove, where the tide cut a deep hole between two rocks. At high tide the water formed a clear, round pool, shallow at the edge, but rapidly deepening down until the bottom disappeared under the green shadow.

The interpreter waded out to his bait, then dropped his ball into the pool. General Lu and I sat lazily on the shore and watched him. Suddenly he gave a quick jerk—his pole bent almost double. A great silver fish leaped high in the air, and the battle was on.

General Lu sat still as a mummy, but I fought that fish all over again. Several times it rose to the surface and came down with a grand splash.

Then we saw it coming along just a few inches below water, straight toward its captor.

Right between the interpreter's legs went the fish, bowling him over and tangling his legs in the line. Then both fish and Chinese submerged out of sight. A tremendous jump and splashing began, after which the Chinese arose dripping with his prize clasped tightly in his arms.

The pair looked too funny for words. I began to laugh, when the General gave a sharp exclamation and pointed to the entrance of the cave.

For an instant I froze with dread. A sinister black line, close the smooth surface of the water like an arrow, rushing straight toward the unsuspecting Chinese. With a yell I grasped a short sword which General Lu still wore at his side, and plunged into the water between the rushing black line and General Lu.

The shark turned and made for me instead. The water reached my belt—too high for quick action. I waited for the one chance I knew would come. The shark turned on his back and opened his huge mouth to grab me, while row after row of gleaming teeth, sharp as razors, glittered menacingly.

I dodged to one side, and lunged at his smooth white stomach with my sword. In excitement, I only scratched him, and he turned again, mad as a whole nest of bumblebees. Murder shown in his little pig eyes as he rushed into the fight.

Some Scots Stories

By MARCO THOMSON

In "The Olden's Weekly" One day, in his long ago, some of the olden's weekly.

Scottishman announced that his fellow countrymen were almost, if not quite, devoid of humour. Not realizing the Scotchman's statement, and there are certain simple minds which believe it to this day.

Fame among cultured folk, and in particular those who know the North, it is still accepted as a fact that a Scotchman can never see a joke. Actually, he can see all the jokes. But because most of them are crude and feeble he glooms over them instead of laughing. His bias is towards subtlety, and he has small appreciation for what we call "broad" effects. He is a humorist, but not a wit.

A barber in a Highland village was shaving an English clergyman who was on holiday there. Unfortunately, Mac had had too many drops of Mountain Dew on the previous night, and as a result his hand was a trifle unsteady, so that he sliced a small portion of skin from his customer's face.

"Ah!" the astonished clergyman exclaimed. "It's a dreadful thing, the drink!"

"It is that," the barber agreed. "Mac, it makes the skin awfully tender."

There are two points I would like to emphasize. One is that no good story remains "new" for more than a few days. The other, and more important, is that to read a story in print is to gain but a portion of its flavor. It should be given to us verbally, and the teller should be expert and able to give full value to every word and know how to present his climax adroitly.

Here is a yarn which, I hope and believe, not widely known:—

An Indian potentate of great distinction was the guest of one of our minor royalties who was residing in his Scottish quarters for the salmon-fishing. The Rajah became obsessed with a desire to try his hand at the sport—and, of course, hoped for success.

He said, the head ghillie, was deputed to instruct the visitor, and, being properly impressed by the other's goodness, was at first not merely courteous but a little timid.

"Fine, yer Royal Highness," he would say. "You're doin' great. Try neither cast, yer Grace. . . . Take it easy now, yer Majesty—and so on. But at last, with beginner's luck, the Rajah got onto a fish, and, being incompetent, looked like losing it. That was Donald's undoing.

"Watch what you're doin'," he exclaimed, fiercely. "Play him! Play him, I tell you. . . . Oh, g'f me the rod, yer big black goat!"

Two Highland farmers met, and one of them said all his most sincerely solemn and with every wish to be helpful:—

"Well, well, John, I hear you ain't of years you was, so fond of has gone an' died. It's a fearful loss, an' I'm tremendous sorry for you. But you must take comfort, John, and mind on what the Good Book says: 'Here the day, and aw' the morn—jist like a travellin' circus.'"

A Scottish M.P. was walking up and down the Terrace at the House of Commons in obvious distress when an English brother member stopped him and said:—

"Why, what's the matter, Mac? You look pretty blue."

"Did ye no hear about my loss?" the Scot asked. "Man, it's been a sore trial. It was this way: I was told that if I sang a sentence like the Thanes it would bring me luck."

"Well?"

"Well? says you. Man! I sang my sentence in right enough, but the dam' string broke."

Traigh Road

The old man talking to himself beside the sea.

Lost in his dream, proud dreams. Needs not, nay, scarcely sees the graceful three. Jeering and grinning there to hide their own. Smallness of soul, with ecstasy must put to shame. He seems King of a strayed, mad army; high and lone in mind, though crouched upon.

Yes, yes, old man! It was so! We are witnesses, you and I.

From Ardnamurchan here to Yocetan Nothing so grand and fine, Nothing so proud and high Lives in the seven lands, moves in the oceans nigh.

As that you celebrate with lips awry, As that with rolling eye You see upstanding from your broader-edged youth.

Let the heels grin, and sing them back their life; You have the truth.

—A. C. Strong in "The Spectator."

Wool Is Favorite For Winter Season

Evening Gowns in Wool One Feature—Black Predominates

Paris.—Wool clothes, heavy, rough and practical, and designed to withstand a long, cold winter, are the favorite contribution to the world economic situation at the recent opening of the annual fall style exhibition is a prediction of one of the biggest wool seasons in a decade. A complete wardrobe of woolens from warm wrap-around coats, springy furled, to wool jersey evening gowns were featured in the collections. One house, favorite of some buyers for modish mise mode, featured subtly woven and diagonal wool coats designed with close-fitting scarf collars, and big patch pockets. These have kimono or raglan sleeves, fitted waistlines and gently flaring skirts, and they are sometimes belted. Collars are occasionally furled, of upstanding shawl design. More often they are unfurled, with wrap-around throat scarf. Dresses featured tailored waists, both lightweight and heavy, with close-fitted bodices, old-fashioned gored skirts, flaring at the knee, and round high necklines. Dress sleeves are often tight to the elbow and slightly puffed above, reminiscent of the modified mutton leg. Homelinen are generally twelve to fourteen inches from the floor. Numerous suits were shown with gored skirts, wool blouses and straight or hip-bone peplum jacket. Several evening gowns of wool jersey considered in chemise with low, round necks and some two inches above the floor edged with inch-wide ruching of velvet ribbon were shown. Others were of bright-colored tulle and moire with fitted bodices and long, full skirts, trimmed with yards of narrow ruching. The most outstanding color was black. Brown, wine-red, wine-purple and bottle-green were other leading colors.

Fewer Germans Going Overseas

The decline in the number of German emigrating overseas, which became marked in 1927 when the total of such emigrants was 61,379, a drop of 3,961 compared with the preceding year, reached 11,436 last year, with a total of only 57,555, reports "Wirtschaft und Statistik" in a recent issue. It is explained that the principal cause of the falling off in overseas emigration is the barrier being raised in the countries, especially in the United States, Argentina, Brazil and Canada, against immigrants because of the almost world-wide unemployment crisis. Of the 1920 German emigrants 22,673 went to the United States, 4,575 to British North America, and 2,933 to Argentina.

A Necessity for Pegasus

Katherine Drayton Simons, in "Our Dumb Animals."

Some folks may think no poetry can be found in holes of hay or bean. But I—who write of ships and seas of babies, books, and bumblebees—

Cash all my poetry checks to pay For sugar feed and corn and hay.

As sure as the cane nourish goats, A second buys a sack of oats;

And 'tween the lowly liniment Becomes a medicated brick.

No better poem beneath the stars Than my gray jumper at the barn!

No poet's pen could ever write My galloping Arab, silver-white!

What makes their coats of mail so clean, Their eyes so clear, their limbs so lean,

Their hearts so brave, their limbs so fleet, Except the food they daily eat?

So, fellow poets, never say That poetry lacks in grain or hay!

Let's not! Yet, I forgot to say, Than poetry, prose is better pay.

My last detective novelties Feeds both my saddle horses yet.

No Corn Borer In Wentworth

Although the crop of corn in Wentworth district is much larger than usual, the dreaded corn borer, which has been reported to have invaded the Toronto district, has not yet menaced their gardens.

The pest has not been operating in the district for some time, although others, resembling it in appearance but not so troublesome, are being found to some extent. Farmers in Dundas and elsewhere still continue to plow the stubble into the ground, however, to prevent a return of the borer. Because much of the crop was destroyed by these borers a few years ago, little was cultivated in succeeding seasons. This year large crops are being raised throughout the county. "I've lost only about three cobs to a thousand," said a farmer from Barntown.

"Anywhere there is corn there is always the borer, but this year it has given only a minimum of trouble," stated a Burlington farmer. He was not referring to the genuine corn-borer, however, but the less harmful pest.

Relief Situation Becomes Serious In St. Catharines

At the meeting of the City Council tonight the Relief and Unemployment Committee reported that the relief situation is daily becoming more serious as there are numbers of new applicants coming to the relief office every day. "These comprise persons, the report added, with, so far, have been self-sustaining and have never applied for assistance or work before. The amount of relief issued during the week ending July 25 was $723.90. There are increasing numbers of single men applying for assistance daily, and your committee has been only able to supply a few with meals at the present time. The general relief situation now is most acute, and from present indications there are no signs of improvement or abatement of request, and unless the emergency relief campaign fund is made available toward the relief of distress at once, hardship and privation will result."

DR. BELL HONORED

Sir Hugo Hirst paid a real tribute to a distinguished Canadian when he presented recently to the British Institution of Electrical Engineers a life-size painting of Dr. Alexander Graham Bell by the famous artist, Walter Westley Russell.

Canadians have the honor of being the world's largest users of the telephone. This is as it should be, for was it not a Scottish-Canadian, Alexander Graham Bell, who invented the telephone at Brantford in 1874? Bell's crude telephone which he used to make the first long distance call from Brantford to Paris, August 10, 1876, has grown until there are now over one million four hundred thousand telephones in Canada—14.16 instruments per hundred inhabitants.

9,000 Jobless Are Registered In Hamilton

Nine thousand men are out of work in Hamilton and have registered their names at the Civic Employment Bureau, so Mayor Peebles stated Monday, when he advised members of the Board of Control that he had written Premier Bennett requesting the Prime Minister with the true state of affairs here, and urging immediate action by the Federal Government as regards the granting of relief to help finance civic works. Of the 9,000 men registered, Mayor Peebles said, 4,000 were single and 5,000 married with children dependent upon them. Many more men are said to be out of work here, who have not registered, to say nothing of the women clerks, typists and factory hands. In order that an early start may be made on relief work, the Controllers instructed W. L. McPaul, City Engineer, to prepare plans immediately for several works, including improvements to the old Mountain Road, the widening of Barton Street and Canoe Street, the grading and paving of Charlton Avenue between Wellington and Westworth Streets, construction of the west-end sewer, and other projects.

This year has been a very favorable one so far with respect to fires, which have occurred, very few having taken place. Last year there were quite a number of outbreaks.

The extreme warm weather of the past few days has resulted in the utilization of an increased amount of water with added demands upon the pumping plant.

Indiana Motorist Found Dead In Field Near Hill Fifteen

A well dressed man of about 35 years was found dead Monday afternoon in a motor car in a field on the Mason farm, near the Fifteen Hill. The Provincial Police, who investigated ascertained from papers in his possession that he is Russell Plautz of Fowler, Indiana. His car had a Michigan license. The body was taken to Butler's undertaking parlor, and Provincial Constable George McKay is trying to get in touch with his relatives.

Fined For Supplying Liquor To Minors

A fine of $50, with the alternative of one month in jail, was the penalty imposed on Harvey St. John, 341 St. John St., on conviction in court yesterday on a charge of supplying liquor to minors.

The magistrate also ordered St. John to vacate his tenement, the name of the offence. The minors were two girls and one young man.

The Mohawk Inn being a public place within the meaning of the L.C.A. Joseph Vitale, Niagara Falls, N. Y., was fined $300 or three months on conviction of illegal possession. The court case was the sequel to a provincial seizure in a garage a-jailing the inn.

Duty Values Fixed For Melons, Pears

The value for duty purposes has been fixed by the Minister of National Revenue, Hon. E. B. Ryckman, on a number of fruits and vegetables, according to a bulletin issued at Ottawa on Monday.

Following are the values: Cantaloupes, muskmelons, honeydews and Camboas, 8 cents per pound; pears, 4 cents per pound.

The values apply under the intermediate and general tariffs, and the weight of the packages are included in the weight for duty.

Application of the values is made at the point of production. Where the products are exported directly to Canada from a diversion or intermediate point, the value for duty shall be those values so fixed, plus all charges thereon to such intermediate point from the point of production.

The above products shipped on consignment without sale prior to shipment, so as to evade the payment of special duty, will be subject to the same duties as if they had been sold at the point of production.

The values will be applied to goods imported on or before July 27, and in transit to Canada on and before July 28.

Exhibits from Great Britain, France, Cuba, Bermuda, Mexico, India, South America and United States will be prominent at this year's Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto.

SPORTS

DANCE WAS BIG SUCCESS

With the spirit of war tucked away, most of the girls changed their war togethery and put into frills and lace to attend the dance held at the Casino under the auspices of the Grimsby Amateur Athletic Association. This was one of the dancing events of the season and it was very gratifying to the executive to see so many Grimsby residents avail themselves of the opportunity to show the executive they are in accord with a sport organization.

It is readily understood that all persons do not like field games but they are willing to help in another way if given a chance. The attendance almost touched the three hundred mark and they came from all parts of the district. In the absence of the President, Chas. T. Farrell being called away at the last minute, C. D. Millard, chairman of this particular committee acted as Master of Ceremonies, and in a few words of appreciation he thanked the large gathering for their presence which showed plainly that the community was behind the executive in their efforts.

The Grimsby Moonlight Serenaders Orchestra was delightful and as their program proceeded into the night, the better it sounded, and many a nice comment was passed in their favor, especially on the time which was excellent. The colors of the club which are blue and white decorated the platform.

Many enquiries have come to the executive as to when they will hold the next dance. There may come a time some day.

The lucky numbers in the drawing were, Jim Vivian Dean, Buffalo, 50 in. 30; Aubrey Wilcox, Grimsby, 20 in. 30; Miss Mary Robinson, St. Ann's, 10 in. 30.

Steve Stevenson, the genial proprietor of the Beach Casino, has an extra feather in his cap for donating the Casino to the Association for this dance.

Mrs. Stevenson must not be overlooked. She made a beautiful hostess and was tireless in her efforts to make the evening a pleasant one.

C. D. Millard, chairman of the dance committee worked hard to put this night's entertainment over. It went over, big.

PEACH QUEENS 21, PORT DALHOUSIE 10

All the king's horses and all the king's men could not keep the Grimsby Peach Queens from winning on Friday night in the game against the Lakeside Ladies of Port Dalhousie. There has been a liberal amount of comment made in regard to the outcome of the Peach Queens up-to-date. This comment has not been in the expected form, namely that the Peach Queens are the best team in the district and the local ladies provided this to the entire satisfaction of the largest crowd to witness a ladies ball game in Grimsby. To prove this the Lakeside team should be one of the best in the province. They are playing almost every day, meeting some of the best teams which should make them almost errorless, but they are apparently far from this. On the other hand they may be half weary.

It was sweet revenge for the Peach Queens. About three weeks ago the local ladies were trimmed badly by this same team at the Port and the local only had half a team and the Port girls were overjoyed at beating a cripple, and press reports from the event enlarged on the wonderful win without any explanation but everything is fair in war.

Oliver Hill is rated high as a pitcher and was right on and strike outs were numerous. All the Queens played the ball they are capable of playing and so far they are sitting on top. Mary Phelps and Helen Dunlop gave the fans a good exhibition of what home runs look like. This is a special feature with these two. But whether the Peach Queens win or not the fact will still remain they are the best team in the children as well as adults welcome

A lady was asked the other day if she ever went to the ball games. She was simply horrified at such a question, as she could not leave the children and included in her answer was that she would love to see one. The children have got to come first and seeing a game is a second consideration. But let it be known that the children are safer on the ball grounds than they are on the street and the association's first thought was the children. Sport is not a waste of time. It helps to build character in youth and as the boys and girls get older, a game of any kind gives them something to do and keeps their minds occupied either playing or watching it played. New blood has to be injected into every game each year and from the younger children who are coming on this new material has to come and it's a very pleasant one or two hours spent for the parents. So mother and dad come on up to the old ball lot and bring the children. It will not cost you a cent unless you feel like contributing to the hat passer.

The second game between High School and Imperial Oil was a good game and the Oil Men were riding on top up to the fifth inning to the tune of 1 to 0 and then the students went across the home plate three times to make the score at the end of the game 3 to 1.

SHOULD OBSERVE ROPE LINES

The ball fans must bear in mind that the rope lines that have been installed are for the purpose of keeping them back in place. The Association has gone to a lot of expense putting posts and rope up. The benches placed inside the ropes are for the players and not the public. Some persist in breaking the rules.

It is not the intention to make it a hardship for anybody to see the ball games from every angle as the ropes have been placed in such a way that a clear view is possible. On the other hand sterner measures may have to be used but it is to be hoped this will not be necessary, so please stand or sit behind the ropes.

SIX TEAMS FOR SECOND SCHEDULE

The executive are not at all pleased with the way some of the players on teams turn out or do not turn out for games. The executive say for a few hours discussing the possibility of six teams entering the second schedule. Some were not any too keen on it. Others thought that players who really wanted to play ball should not be deprived of doing so. After a long controversy it was finally decided to put six teams in.

Apparently some of the players do not appreciate this and do not take their ball seriously. Some of the teams are taking the game seriously and no doubt their efforts will show at the end of the season.

The executive are anxious that members of all teams will be on hand for their respective games giving the fellows that are anxious to play a square deal and the fans a game worth while looking at.

LAKESIDES GET LOSS IN GRIMSBY

In a very loose game, Grimsby Ladies defeated Lakesides last evening in the Peach tournament by the score 20 - 9. The winners pounded the ball hard including eight extra base hits besides running the bases very cleverly to swell the count. In three innings they amassed a total of ten runs to practically clinch the game. The winners all played sparkling ball, both in the field and at bat. Peare McKen showed for the losers with a deep clout to left to circle the base. (St. Catharines Standard.)

A lot of the fans have signified their intention of following the Peach Queens to Niagara Falls on Friday night for their league fixture. The game starts at 7:15.
